Claude for Small Business: 10 workflows, ranked

Anthropic says there are 43. These are the ten we would look at first, most useful to least, with what to check before you switch each one on.

Before you start

Claude for Small Business is a plugin that runs inside Claude Cowork, Anthropic's desktop app. According to Anthropic's September update it is available on every paid Claude plan. Anthropic's small business page describes Pro for one person and Team for a business with more than one, both month to month, but lists no prices.

Approval first. Workflows start in approval mode, so Claude drafts and prepares and you decide. Payroll is staged for you to submit, bills wait for your approval before payment, and nothing sends without your say-so by default.

Two honest caveats. There is no UK date or UK pricing on any of Anthropic's pages, and we have not used the product ourselves. Treat this guide as a map of what exists, not a promise of what you can switch on in Britain today.

How we ranked them

This is our judgement, based only on what Anthropic has published about each workflow. The test: how much does this job cost a small business when it goes wrong, and how much of it can Claude safely prepare for you? Jobs that cost you money when missed, such as an unanswered enquiry or a late invoice, come first.

The ranking at a glance

1. Speed to lead
2. Chase invoices
3. Close the month
4. Monday brief
5. Proposal builder
6. Plan payroll
7. Check margins
8. Social content engine
9. Grow pipeline
10. Build agent

The ranking, most useful first

01 Speed to lead

/speed-to-lead

Answers new enquiries on nights and weekends with real meeting times, and logs them in your CRM. Nothing sends until you approve.

WHY IT RANKS HERE

The customer who messages at 9pm usually goes to whoever replies first.

CHECK BEFORE YOU USE IT

Connect your CRM and calendar first, then check the meeting times it offers are ones you can keep.

02 Chase invoices

Invoice chaser

Anthropic names an invoice chaser in the May launch. Its payroll workflow also chases overdue invoices before it readies the run.

WHY IT RANKS HERE

Money owed is money you cannot spend, so this is the quickest route from admin to cash.

CHECK BEFORE YOU USE IT

Read each reminder before it goes. The tone is yours to set.

03 Close the month

/close-month

Reconciles your books against payment processors, flags what does not match, and writes a plain-English profit and loss and a close packet for your accountant.

WHY IT RANKS HERE

It saves the end-of-month scramble and gives your accountant clean material.

CHECK BEFORE YOU USE IT

Works best with a connected accounting tool. Check yours is on the tools list.

04 Monday brief

/monday-brief

Cash, sales, pipeline, your calendar and your top priority on one page. Anthropic's example posts it to Slack at 6:30am.

WHY IT RANKS HERE

It will not make money by itself, but it ends the Monday morning hunt for numbers.

CHECK BEFORE YOU USE IT

Only as good as the tools connected to it.

05 Proposal builder

/proposal-builder

Turns a voice memo and site photos into a proposal in your format, priced from your last three deals.

WHY IT RANKS HERE

Quotes are where small firms lose time and, sometimes, margin.

CHECK BEFORE YOU USE IT

Check the price before it goes anywhere. A wrong proposal costs more than a slow one.

06 Plan payroll

/plan-payroll

Checks you will have the cash, chases overdue invoices and readies the payroll run for you to submit.

WHY IT RANKS HERE

It overlaps with the invoice and month-end jobs above, so it ranks mid-table.

CHECK BEFORE YOU USE IT

Payroll is staged for you. You press the button. Check UK specifics yourself.

07 Check margins

Margin analyser

Named in the May launch, with little detail published. The idea is to show which lines earn the least.

WHY IT RANKS HERE

Many small firms do not know which products or jobs earn the least.

CHECK BEFORE YOU USE IT

You can try a rough version in a normal Claude chat today (see the prompts later in this guide).

08 Social content engine

/social-content-engine

Plans next week's content, for example a two-week posting calendar with captions for your approval.

WHY IT RANKS HERE

Useful, but a draft calendar is easier to replace than a late invoice.

CHECK BEFORE YOU USE IT

Edit every caption. It should sound like you.

09 Grow pipeline

/grow-pipeline

Finds prospects who resemble your best customers and writes outreach in your voice.

WHY IT RANKS HERE

Potentially valuable, but outreach in your name is your reputation.

CHECK BEFORE YOU USE IT

Read every message before it goes out.

10 Build agent

/build-agent

Turns a recurring manual task into a workflow you can run by name or on a schedule.

WHY IT RANKS HERE

You need to know which task to automate first, and the nine above are a good way to find out.

CHECK BEFORE YOU USE IT

Start by describing one task you do every week.

The rest of the list

Anthropic's pages also name Pay the bills, Call list, Restock, Marketing Monday, Win back lapsed customers, Lead triager, Contract reviewer, Month-end prepper, Tax-season organiser, Onboarding and Build connector. Tax prep covers quarterly taxes and 1099s, which are US terms, so check what applies to a UK firm before relying on it. Anthropic says there are 43 workflows in total but names only some publicly. It names no separate HR or customer service workflows.

The 37 tools it connects to

Listed in Anthropic's September update. Several are common in the UK, such as Xero, QuickBooks, Shopify, Stripe and Google Workspace. Others are US-centred, so check each one against how you actually work.

Airwallex · Apollo · Atlassian · Canva · Clay · Docusign · Emergent · Expensify · Gmail · Google Calendar · Google Drive · Gusto · HubSpot · Intuit Mailchimp · Intuit QuickBooks · Microsoft 365 · monday.com · MYOB · NetSuite · Notion · PayPal · Ramp · RingCentral · Salesforce · Shopify · Slack · Square · Stripe · TikTok Ads · Trello · Wix · Xero · Zapier · Zoho Books · Zoho CRM · Zoho Desk and Zoom

Three jobs to try today in a normal chat

You can do a rough version of the top jobs in a normal Claude chat with a few pasted lines. These prompts are our adaptations of the job names, not Anthropic's wording, and you read every draft before anything goes out.

Chase invoices

> Put these in order of who to chase first. For each, draft a short, polite reminder in a friendly British tone, firmer for anything over 30 days late. Do not send anything.

Paste a list of overdue invoices first.

Check margins

> Work out the profit margin on each line as a percentage. Show me the three lowest and suggest one change for each, and tell me what you are assuming.

Paste what you sold, what each item cost and what you charged. Check the sums yourself before you act on them.

Speed to lead

> Sort these into hot, warm and cold with one line on why. For the hot ones, draft a reply offering two times for a call this week.

Paste your last ten enquiries first.

What it could be worth

Here is arithmetic on our assumptions, not Anthropic's. Say the money admin in your week (chasing payments, checking margins, sorting enquiries) takes three hours. If a workflow trims a third of that, you get an hour back a week. Over 48 working weeks that is about 48 hours, or six working days. At £30 an hour that is roughly £1,440 a year of time.

Your numbers will differ, so time your own week first. It is an illustration, the plans cost money, and the saving only exists if you use the drafts.

Where to start

1. Pick one job. Choose the top job that fits your week. Do not switch on forty workflows.
2. Try the copy-paste version for a fortnight. Compare it with doing the job by hand.
3. Connect a tool if it earns its place. Link your accounting or CRM tool so Claude can read the real figures.
4. Keep the approval switch on. Read every draft before it sends, posts or pays.
